Brazilian Butt Lifts

What is a Brazilian Butt Lift?

There are many reasons that people may wish to undergo a buttock enhancement, but the most common reasons are to add shape and volume.

Until recently, implants were the only way to address these concerns. Now, implants are becoming less popular as people are finding more-natural looking results with a fat transfer to the buttock.

Also referred to as a buttock augmentation with autologous fat transfer, this procedure includes removing fat from one area of the body and placing it onto the buttock.

Dr Morris Ritz is one of the only surgeons in the Melbourne area who performs these fat transfers and butt lifts, especially famous Brazilian Butt Lift. With skilled hands, he can not only increase the size of your buttocks, but also help to create a shapelier behind. Schedule your consultation today.

What happens on the day?

When you arrive for your surgery, Dr Ritz will prepare you for your fat graft by marking the areas on your buttocks that you wish to contour, as well as the areas he will take the fat from; usually, the abdomen, flanks, back or thighs.

Once asleep, Dr Ritz will carefully make the necessary incisions to extract the fat cells. From the pre-determined stubborn fatty areas on your body, he will use a liposuction cannula to remove the fat cells.

These cells will then be prepared as grafts and precisely placed into the buttock. The procedure is fairly complex, as the fat must be harvested quickly so to preserve the overall integrity of the cells.

Unlike with ordinary liposuction, a fat transfer won't disrupt the fat cell's membrane and will produce living fat cells.

Dr Ritz and his team of specialists will effectively insert the live fat cells so they can reincorporate with the soft tissues of your buttock.
